Farmingville, NY - On Sunday, February 9, Councilwoman Valerie M. Cartright attended the women's basketball game at Stony Brook University. The Seawolves won 76-63 against the University of New Hampshire Wildcats. This was a pivotal win for the Seawolves, as it put them a half game out of second place in the America East conference and avenged an overtime loss to UNH from earlier in the season.

Councilwoman Cartright stated, "I am privileged to represent Stony Brook University within Council District One. Cheering on the Seawolves with friends and family was a great way to spend a Sunday afternoon. The school spirit and camaraderie makes for a truly exciting experience."

"It was great having Councilwoman Cartright supporting us at our game versus New Hampshire. Our program strives to be highly competitive in the America East and it was a huge win. We are very excited about building a women's program that is successful on the court, in the classroom and very active in our community," said Head Coach Beth O'Boyle.
